Family Camp!

Staff Outing

On Saturday, we shall be traveling to a far away land. They call it Devil's Lake. We'll stay there for the day. :)

Dear PR (Pubescent Relationships) Foreman,

I've heard that Sky Lodge is known as a place where "relationships take flight." If that's true, can you tell me how a young, single, Jesus-loving gal like me can catch the eye of an eligible Zone bachelor?

Signed, Future Old Maid

Dear Future Old Maid,

I get this question a lot from desperate girls like yourself. I won't lie to you, this is an important issue for you to resolve before you leave camp this summer, otherwise you may have trouble finding other prospects, and you might die alone and unfulfilled.

I advise you to spend all your time—around-the-clock—thinking of clever ways to ensnare a male youth of your very own. Use your solitude time to write love letters disguised as "encouraging notes" to the Zone boys. These are a crowd favorite! They also appreciate thick layers of lipstick—the redder, the better. Going swimming in co-ed groups is an ingenious way to reveal as much of your body as possible while still keeping all your Bs covered—modest is hottest! Lastly, you need to spend some quality time together as a couple. Request a walk date, play a round of scenic mini-golf, or volunteer to clean something no one else wants to clean.

Once you've identified your soulmate from among the crowd, be sure to pray for him and let him know right away that God has revealed to you that the two of you will one day be married; guys find it reassuring to hear this. If you follow these tips but still don't find a husband, try striking up a relationship with a camper or a counselor. If that still fails, give up hope, cut your hair short, and join a convent.

Peace and blessings, PRF

Romans 1:16

For I am not ashamed of this Good News about Christ. It is the power of God at work, saving everyone who believes.
